More than 1 million people reportedly took to the streets of Manhattan for the annual Gay Pride Parade on Sunday afternoon.

Mayor Bill de Blasio and his family took part in the parade, as well as New York Governor Andrew Cuomo and other city officials.

Laverne Cox of "Orange Is the New Black" fame was one of the grandmasters of the parade along with actor Jonathan Groff. The parade started out on Fifth Avenue before ending at the Stonewall Inn.

This year commemorated the 45th anniversary of the 1969 Stonewall riots, when a police raid sparked violence that is today a cornerstone of the Gay Rights movement. METRO

Power of pride

"For me, pride is about empowerment. This is my first time at the New York parade, and I really liked it. New York is far forward compared to other states, and I feel like gay people have come a really long way [since] Stonewall."

Brittany Timko, 28, New Haven, Conn.

"For me, pride means freedom. I can be myself and express myself. I've been coming here for 14 years, and times have really changed. Now there are a lot of people coming to the parade from all over the world."

Alvin Greathouse, 42, Brooklyn

"New York is a very friendly place.

People want to engage. They want to hear your story and tell their stories. It's very 'Live and let live.' And I think it's great that society's at a point where politicians can show up and support us, reflecting public opinion and leadership."

NYPD. Cops seek man who choked woman and stabbed rescuer

Cops are on the lookout for a suspect in a brutal attack on two people in Staten Island on Friday morning. The man police seek allegedly choked a woman and stabbed a would-be rescuer in the back with a screwdriver.

Investigators said John Matthews, 34, got into an argument with an unnamed woman at around 3:35 a.m. outside of Play Sports Bar in Annadale.

At some point, the argument turned physical, with Matthews allegedly striking and choking the woman. A 36-year-old man drove by the bar and witnessed the attack before, police said, he parked his car to help the woman.

The man's intervention reportedly led to Matthews pulling a screwdriver from his pants pocket and stabbing the victim's back multiple times.

Matthews then fled the scene in a 2003 burgundy

Bus riders in the city might have an easier commute soon, as more than 100 new countdown clocks are scheduled for installation.

The Council members are expected to consult with the Department of Transportation as to when they can erect the clocks.

Drugs. New York busts international khat trafficking ring

New York authorities announced criminal charges against 17 people accused of running an international drug ring trafficking in tons of khat, a leafy plant chewed as a stimulant.

The ring allegedly moved the khat across four continents and distributed it in New York, Massachusetts and Ohio, New York Attorney General Eric Schneiderman and New York City Police Department Commissioner William Bratton said.

Khat is grown and sold legally in much of eastern Africa where chewing the plant is an ancient social custom. It is widely consumed by Yemeni, Somali and Ethiopian communities and is considered a controlled substance in the United States.

According to the 215-count indictment unsealed in Brooklyn Supreme Court, the khat was obtained in Yemen,

"Khat is a dangerous and illegal drug with worldwide reach," Schneiderman said. "As a result of this international takedown, a sophisticated operation accused of bringing drugs into the United States and sending the profits overseas has been shut down."

Following a year-long investigation, the indictment charges 17 co-conspirators — from England; New York City; Rochester, New York; Everett, Massachusetts; and Minnesota — with crimes including drug trafficking and possession, money laundering and conspiracy. REUTERS

$317M

There is no ready estimate of how much the plan might cost, but the administration argued it can save the state $317 million, and almost $400,000 in lifetime medical costs for each case of avoided infection.

The plan calls for identifying HIV-infected individuals who remain undiagnosed and helping them get care. / GETTY IMAGES

New York unveils plan to decrease HIV infections

Big goal. The plan aims to curb the number of new infections.

On the 45th anniversary of the Stonewall Inn riots, Gov. Andrew Cuomo released a plan to lower New Yorkers' rates of HIV infection below the number of HIV-related deaths.

The plan focuses on reducing new HIV infections to 750 cases by 2020. Last year, the state reported 3,000 new HIV infections, down from 14,000 in 1993.

"Thirty years ago, New York was the epicenter of the AIDS crisis. Today, I am proud to announce that we are in a position to be the first state in the nation committed to ending this epidemic," Cuomo said.

The first part of the plan is to identify HIV-infected individuals who remain undiagnosed and help them get care. Once they get care, the state wants to make sure they have anti-HIV therapy available to suppress the virus and prevent transmission.

The final objective is to provide access to Pre-Exposure Prophylaxis — or PrEP — to high-risk persons, whereby HIV-negative individuals take daily antiviral medication to reduce risk of transmission.

Advocates around the state commended the governor's plan as ambi-

The 18-year-old was taken to Bellevue Hospital and treated for abrasions to his head in addition to the broken jaw and fractured eye socket, the NYPD said.

Police described the suspect as an Asian man in his late teens or early twenties.

Surveillance footage of the suspect shows him walking with another man on a sidewalk, according to the NYPD.

Fast-food customer gets bag of pot with chicken order

A Maryland woman who ordered a meal at a Sonic fast-food restaurant got something extra with her French fries — a bag of marijuana.

Carla McFarland, 35, of Frederick, Maryland, and her children, ages 6 and 8, were about to eat a chicken-strips lunch on Thursday when she discovered a small, green plastic bag of marijuana in her fries, according to the Frederick County Sheriff's Office.

Spokeswoman Lieutenant Jennifer Bailey said on Friday no arrests had been made and that the incident is under investigation.

McFarland posted about her find on Facebook, along with a photo of the bag.

"I order, food comes, I open a bag and this is what I see after 3 double takes ... yes that's what it is," she wrote.

McFarland said a Sonic employee claimed ownership of the marijuana and was promptly fired. McFarland also called police.

Sonic spokesman Patrick Lenow said that restaurant management contacted police and was cooperating with authorities.

"The employee involved is no longer associated with the company, and the franchisee is conducting an investigation to ensure the issue is fully resolved," he said in a statement. REUTERS

Just a week after her coronation, the winner of the 2014 Miss Florida pageant was dethroned on Friday when organizers said they had crowned the wrong woman after a vote-counting error.

OMG! A mini-break is what your dog needs

A short stay in the dog house could actually be positive for your pooch. A new study by British researchers measured a range of stress parameters, such as nose and core body temperature, lip-licking and yawning, in 29 privately owned dogs both at home and in boarding kennels. Research suggested that dogs found a change of scene stressful, but the new evidence points to the contrary. Study co-author Lisa Collins, an animal behavior expert from University of Lincoln, U.K., tells Metro why a mini-break for your mutt isn't a bad thing.

Is leaving your dog in a boarding kennel more stressful for the owner than the pet?

I expect so. I have a dog, and everyone I know who has a dog feels super guilty about leaving their dogs at the kennel, but the study shows there's no reason to stress about it.

So, you don't feel guilty?
No.

Do stress levels vary between breeds?

There were no breed differences. The only exceptions were male neutered dogs, which seemed to show a greater response.

We answer your student loan FAQs

Money. About to make your first loan payment? Here's what you should know.

Recent college graduates will soon face the first payments on their student loans, and many are wondering how best to manage their debt.

Personal finance experts Mark Kantrowitz, senior vice president of Edvisors Network Inc, and Reyna Gobel, author of "Graduation Debt: How to Manage Student Loans" answer some important questions.

What advice do you have for recent grads who have student debt? What should they do first?

Graduates first need to understand that there's no longer a good reason to default on federal student loans, said Gobel.

The Department of Education now offers a slew of repayment options. Borrowers can get out of default and even erase the negative marks from their credit reports with rehabilitation programs. Repayment options are explained on the department's site (www.studentaid.ed.gov).

When saddled with student loan debt, is it more efficient to just consolidate and lock in a low rate?

Consolidating federal student loans typically won't change the overall interest rate paid, since the new rate is a weighted average of the original fixed-rate loans.

But consolidating makes repayment simpler — one loan payment instead of several — and choosing a payback period longer than the standard 10 years can lower monthly payments. That could free up money for other important goals.

It's time for new grads to study up on loan repayment options. / DIGITAL VISION

Is it a good idea to defer a loan? What are the risks?

Deferment allows the borrower to temporarily delay loan repayments because of economic hardship. On certain loans — Federal Perkins Loans, Direct Subsidized Loans and Subsidized Stafford Loans — the government may pay the interest. Borrowers who don't qualify for deferment may be able to get forbearance, which also means interest accrues.

What about public service forgiveness options?

People with big federal student loan debt and low incomes can benefit from two relatively new repayment plans: income-based repayment and "Pay as You Earn."

Both cap the borrower's monthly payment (the Pay as You Earn cap is typically the lowest). The Public Service Loan Forgiveness plan erases remaining Direct Loan balances after 10 years for people who work full time in eligible jobs, such as law enforcement, the military, public schools and nonprofits, Kantrowitz said.

To get into college, play a game or two

Applications. A creative new way for first-generation college students to get the information they need.

For the first-time college hopeful in a family, who might have less help navigating the complex application process, would playing some games offer insights, help with making school choices and boost his or her chances of completing a degree?

Researchers and game developers at the University of Southern California hope so.

They've developed a card game, a Facebook game and an online shoot-em-up action game designed to impart college-application strategies that so-called "first-generation" students may not learn anywhere else.

"They might have parents who don't know much about the college application process and attend schools that don't have college support," says Zoe Corwin, research director for USC's Pullias Center for Higher Education.

Those deficits, she adds, "have real implications for college graduation rates."

Quoted

"All I knew [about the application process] was that I needed to get my parents' tax information and give it to the government. And that was scary — that the government was poking at you."

Samantha Castillo, 21
At the time of Game Innovation Lab's launch, Castillo was an 11th grader living in a Latino neighborhood where just getting through high school was something of an accomplishment. Castillo knew she wanted more education but assumed that would mean community college.

Origins

The education center started its outreach by offering mentoring programs for local teens, but quickly realized it didn't have enough funding to reach more than a few hundred students, Corwin says.

So, four years ago, it reached out to the university's Game Innovation Lab.

The university held game-design camps for low-income high school students who lived near the urban campus. The camps taught design skills while soliciting the students' help in creating the games.

Aims

The researchers are trying to tackle a trifecta of issues that disproportionately plagues lower-income students, such as:

1 not applying for college when they're capable,

2 not enrolling in college even after being accepted and

3 "under-matching," or choosing to attend a less-selective school than one their academic credentials qualify them for

Strategies

The lab's first effort was a card game, Application Crunch, which required players to take on the role of college applicants juggling academics, extracurricular activities, work and service while competing for college admission and scholarships.

"The game teaches you things like how to request a recommendation letter early, the importance of staying on top of deadlines [and] the importance of submitting the best application you can," Corwin says.

Mission: Admission builds on those lessons with some competitive aspects. For example, players who miss the deadline for filing the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), might get into a school but might not be able to pay for it. Or they may vie for a single slot at a selective school, so those who submit an inadequate application lose out.

Ambition

A Pell Institute study found that low-income, first-generation students were seven times more likely to earn bachelor's degrees if they started at four-year institutions, but the vast majority began and ended their academic careers at public two-year and for-profit colleges.

Graduation Strike Force has more nuanced strategies for finding the right college for the player's avatar, one that balances financial, academic and cultural aspects to find the right fit.

"The games pushed me to open up and ask questions," says student Samantha Castillo. "It really helped clarify ... what you can do to change your life." REUTERS

CULTURE

Twitter feed

We check in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, Seth MacFarlane accuses Facebook of organ theft, Conan O'Brien mocks a furniture giant and Lindsay Lohan rings in the Islamic month of fasting.

@SethMacFarlane: Woke up this morning to find that Facebook stole one of my kidneys.

@ConanOBrien: IKEA is giving its US workers a raise. The CEO said, "We want IKEA workers to stick around longer than IKEA products."

@lindsaylohan: Happy Ramadan to those who are celebrating :-)

Few shows have given viewers as much with so little as the BBC's "Sherlock." Viewers perpetually are left wondering whether this is the last time they will get any more. But Martin Freeman, who plays Dr. John Watson, dropped the first hint of what's to come for the show since its third season aired in January. In an interview with The Telegraph, Freeman said "Sherlock" will resume filming early next year for what will likely be a 2015 special. That wasn't all: His real-life partner, Amanda Abbington, joined the series this year as Watson's wife, Mary Morstan. If you don't know your Holmes canon, stop reading now. "While we play fast and loose with the original stories, we generally follow the trajectory of what [Arthur] Conan Doyle did. So [Watson] gets married, and then Mary dies — so at some point presumably she'll die," Freeman said.

Kelly Osbourne gets her head tattooed

If you thought that Kelly Osbourne's days as a wild child were over, you thought wrong. She might have gotten her act together and everything, but this weekend the daughter of Ozzy Osbourne got her head tattooed. Yup, you don't need glasses. SHE REALLY GOT HER HEAD TATTOOED! On her Instagram, she posted several photos of the process and a final one showing the result. The tattoo is on the side of her head and reads "Stories..." Hmm, we guess it could be worse (as in, it could have been on her forehead), but we still don't think it's pretty. Good thing her hair will grown out at some point, right?

Justin Bieber and Chris Brown battle it out

Two of the world's most (in)famous singers duked it out on the basketball court Saturday. Justin Bieber and Chris Brown were playing at the BET Celebrity Basketball Game in LA on opposite teams, but luckily that didn't make them enemies. The two had time to do some sweaty posing for the cameras after the game. Snoop Dogg (or Snoop Lion, or whatever he's called these days) was also participating in the game on Brown's team. No word on who won, but we hear that both Bieber and Brown showed off some mad basketball skills, while Snoop Dogg busted a few hilarious dance moves.

In related news

Justin joins Beyonce and Jay-Z — sort of

In other Bieber-related news (there is always so much to choose from), the singer made a small appearance on Beyonce and Jay-Z's "On The Run" tour during the weekend. Actually, it was only his mug shot that did. While Jay-Z performed "H to the Izzo," a whole bunch of celebrity mug shots were shown in the background. At the end of the performance Beyonce said, referring to the mug shots, "Even the greatest can fall." Does this mean Beyonce and Jay-Z think Justin Bieber is great?!

Doing 'Once' in America

Interview. Director John Carney talks about making another "stealth musical" with "Begin Again."

Seven years ago, Irish musician-turned-filmmaker John Carney watched his little film — "Once," starring Glen Hansard as a street musician — blossom into a phenomenon. He has returned to the genre and to New York City with "Begin Again," which concerns an A&R guy (Mark Ruffalo) who is working on a new kind of record with a shy musician (Keira Knightley).

Why did you want to return to the genre?

The story is what appealed to me. I don't really sit down thinking something should be a musical. I sit down and think about what I'm trying to get off my chest.

Like 'Once,' this isn't a traditional musical. It's realistic, and the songs rise organically from the narrative.

They're stealth musicals, aren't they? They not like Broadway musicals where the dialogue is there to join the dots between songs. It's the other way around.

One thing it brings up is, how do musicians these days actually make a living?

That's a huge question and one that in this film is just asked, as opposed to answered. I would not make any great claims to answering that question. It's quite a sensitive issue for a lot of artists I know. A lot of people in this field feel they're being taken advantage of, or it's assumed their work should be done for free. If a plumber comes to your house to fix your toilet, you have to pay him.

You also focus not only on a musician but on an A&R guy, who is not treated like a greed monster.

I felt like exploring what it's like for someone for whom this business was their reason to live. The discovery of new music is like the discovery of new lands. When you see an A&R man dragging around their band, you can see someone who looks like they've discovered an island.

@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Do your thing

What is it like making a movie about musicians with actors who aren't primarily musicians?

It's nice to mix it up a little bit. Sometimes it's nice to have an actor who's singing or a singer who's acting and not have everybody doing what they're comfortable doing. Keira was outside her comfort zone having to perform a song or play the guitar. While Adam [Levine], who is completely comfortable with that side of things — you couldn't stop him from singing or playing — was more nervous around the acting side of things.

Box office. Audiences, robotically assemble!

This has been a summer of slightly underwhelming box office returns on major film franchises, but this trend didn't apply to "Transformers: Age of Extinction," the fourth in the series about Hasbro battle bots that turn into cars (and in this case, also dinosaurs).

Over the three-day weekend, the Paramount behemoth assembled $100 million at the North American box office, plus another $201.3 million from international markets — a record high for 2014.

"Transformers" was the weekend's only major new release. In holdovers, "22 Jump Street" collected another $15.4 million, making its total take thus far $139 million. Last week's winner, "Think Like a Man Too," tumbled to fourth, with only $10.4 million in grosses; its total now stands at $48.1 million.

Meanwhile, "Snowpiercer" — the acclaimed English-language South Korean thriller starring Chris Evans and Tilda Swinton — took in $162,000 from eight theaters. Its $20,250 average is promising as it spreads across the nation.

Big Jim

Dean Norris picked one heck of a series to follow up "Breaking Bad." In "Under the Dome," Norris takes on the dastardly role of local politico Big Jim in the series based on the novel by Stephen King. The choice certainly seems to be working out for him: The series, a smash hit last summer, returns for another season chronicling a mysteriously cut-off town. Here, Norris lets us in on what to expect this year.

On where we find Big Jim at the start of the season: "Big Jim thinks he knows what's best for the town, and he thinks he's inspired by the dome to do what he does. ... What happens in the first episode is that he comes to an awakening. He reevaluates his position and his kind of personal trajectory and decides that maybe a different kind of Big Jim is required to survive under the dome. Whether that turns out to be true is what we'll find out as the season goes on. One of the things that Big Jim is trying to deal with is seeing if there is enough food for everybody, if there is enough water for everybody and what resources are left for us to survive under the dome."

On whether Big Jim might actually be lightening up a little bit this season: "Actually, I think so. One thing we're talking about this year is including some redemption for Big Jim. It's actually in the first episode that he has a 'come to God' moment where he believes that maybe his purpose in life shouldn't be to be so nasty. And that's a story arc that continues throughout the season: whether he has a higher purpose — a greater purpose — other than just killing people and being mean to his son."

So King-ian

On Stephen King writing the first new episode:

"Can I say something about Stephen King? The first episode is so Stephen King-ian, and part of it is that almost in the midst of the kind of most horrifying and tragic elements, there are these little lines that are humorous. It was cool to see that because it's in his books [so] it was so cool to see it in the script, too. I think you'll see in that first episode that there are moments where Big Jim maybe sees ghosts or they may be whatever they are. And while it's a kind of a terrifying or horrifying situation, it's also funny to see Big Jim have to squirm with these kind of Ghosts of Christmas Past and the future and have to deal with them. It's such a Stephen King-ian thing and it's all present there in the first episode that he wrote."

YOUR WALLET IS MORE THAN STORAGE

A dear friend of mine is an entrepreneur who often complained about feeling financially blocked. One day while talking about her bills, she pulled out her wallet to pay for something. I gasped when I glanced at it. She was carrying around a tattered wristlet filled to the brim with credit cards, coins, crumpled receipts, lip gloss and God knows what else. My immediate response was, "If you want to clean up your finances, you must clean up your wallet!"

One day later she texted me a picture of her shiny new red wallet, each section perfectly organized. Within two weeks her business was back in action; deals that had been held up for months were closing. I believe the difference was the wallet. Once she had her personal money in order, she cleared subconscious blocks and was able to move freely and with ease in any situation related to finances or business.

Do you feel blocked financially? Is it far too often that the deal doesn't go through, the job doesn't work out or simply that you don't have enough money? Many times, a financial block stems from an energetic block. Remember, energy is in everything, even in your wallet. For the sake of your finances and our economy, let's clean up your wallet to clear your energetic connection to receiving.

If your wallet is beaten up or overstuffed, buy a new one that's clean, beautiful and can hold all you need to carry. Your wallet reflects your relationship to money. Is it ripped and filled with old receipts? Is it old and dirty? A wallet isn't just an accessory, it's where you store your money. So make sure you love it! Don't be reluctant to invest in one that makes you feel good.

Your new, clean wallet will energetically support you and make a statement to the universe that you're ready to receive. Respect your money, and your money will respect you.

Auspicious colors

In the red? Choose a red wallet

When picking out a new wallet, be mindful of its color. In the feng shui tradition, certain colors welcome abundance, such as gold, red and green. Bust out the sparkly gold or the radiant red. Go big or go home with this one.

Feng shui expert Kate MacKinnon says, "Like everything in feng shui, the most important way to make space is to clear clutter. So make sure your wallet is clear of clutter (paper, receipts, etc.) and organized."

Heimlich: 40 years of saving lives

'The Maneuver.'
New documentary is seeking funds
through Kickstarter.

Dr. Henry Heimlich, whose maneuver has saved untold numbers of choking victims since he devised it in 1974, believes it still has untapped potential.

From upscale restaurants to your local diner, you've surely seen the choking victim sign posted somewhere discreet but visible. The Heimlich maneuver marks 40 years this summer, and the doctor, 94, is taking part in "The Maneuver," a new documentary seeking funds through Kickstarter.

Heimlich was first inspired to develop the technique when he read an article in The New York Times. "Among other things, it mentioned that among children under 1 year old, there are many choking deaths. It was in large numbers in adults [too]."

Given the strength of the rib cage to protect vital organs, Heimlich hypothesized that pressing the diaphragm would compress the lungs, releasing the excess air they store even during exhalation. He tested his theory on an anesthetized dog in his lab at Jewish Hospital of Cincinnati, where he was director of surgery. "[I] pushed up on the diaphragm and the meat flew across the room. I did that repeatedly, and I knew that I had a possible cure for choking," he said.

Instead of submitting his findings to a medical journal, where "it would take years to get the word out," he says, Heimlich went straight to a well-known medical columnist. Just four days after publication, a reader told The Seattle Times about saving his neighbor's wife with the maneuver.

And he says that the method still has untapped potential, specifically when it comes to drowning victims, whose lungs often contain water. Heimlich is adamant that his maneuver should be the go-to first aid in such cases.

Public input

The power of the crowd

As "The Maneuver" seeks the public's support through Kickstarter, Heimlich himself credits ordinary people with helping to expand the application of the maneuver. One woman figured out a way to perform the Heimlich on herself, using the railing of her porch, when she was choking and wrote to Heimlich of her discovery. The doctor has since developed modified versions of the maneuver for use on infants and for children whose arms are not long enough to wrap around an adult's stomach.

Find and keep a career mentor

Personal relationships are more important than ever in the job world.

Navigating the world of business can be tough — especially when you're in the early stages of your career. Finding a mentor can be the key to success. Enter the Every Day Connect campaign, a new project sponsored by Fairfield Inn and Suites as a way to support the connections between young professionals and the mentors who have encouraged them.

"I think mentorship is important to everyone, but a lot of people are afraid to reach out," says Fairfield Inn's Vice President of Global Brand Management Shruti Buckley. "But right now the workforce is so competitive, so it's more important than ever to build those relationships."

A survey commissioned by Fairfield revealed that 66 percent of professionals say personal relationships have helped them in their careers. We talked to several young entrepreneurs named to the Forbes "30 under 30" 2014 list for their suggestions on how foster a strong mentoring network.

LAKSHMI GANDHI
lakshmi.gandhi@metro.us

Don't think of it as formally finding a 'mentor'

Kane Sarhan, who co-founded @Enstitute, a program that matches young people with entrepreneurial apprenticeships, says the best mentoring relationships come about organically. "We find with a lot of our students, mentors just develop naturally once you find someone you connect with," he says. "Those really strong personal relationships are long lasting."

Find someone you can bounce ideas off of

"It's always good to have different people, opinions and perspectives around," explains Edun Full, the creator of SunSaluter, a device that makes solar panels more efficient. Full says her mentor has been instrumental in the early growth of her company. "Just talking things through and weighing the pros and cons was really key to making the right decisions," she says.

Be persistent without being annoying

Full also stresses that you shouldn't give up if there is a particular person you want to connect with. "If someone doesn't respond to your email [right away], there are so many reasons why," she points out. At the same time, remember to respect your mentor's time. "Be humble and assertive, but not necessarily aggressive," says Meg Gill, an executive with Golden Road Brewing.

Don't be afraid to reach out

If you are shy about approaching someone in your field, don't be. Fairfield's survey reveals that 77 percent of employed adults said they were willing to help new grads find work. But it's important that young people show that they are serious.

"I didn't go out looking for mentors," says Gill. "I went out looking to learn. A lot of people don't just let someone come up to them, so you have to be passionate about something."

Let your mentor know the impact he or she has had

Always remember to let your mentors and advisors know that you appreciate them. "I'm constantly showing gratitude toward my mentors," says Sarhan. "A lot of times, one problem with my generation is the lack of humility," says the 26-year old. He says that doing things as simple as sending thank you cards, birthday presents and just calling to catch up can go a long way.

You should be working to help your mentor, too

Mentoring isn't a one-way street. Mark Arnoldy is the Executive Director of Nyaya Health, which works to bring health-care to remote parts of Nepal. He says younger workers shouldn't discount their unique takes on the world. "If you are sincere in your generosity, great things will come your way and 'networking' can be a source of joy rather than something slimy and shallow," he says.

There is no such thing as reasonable or sensible gun legislation when lawmakers are focused on restricting or denying Second Amendment rights to law-abiding citizens. The majority of gun laws do nothing to address the issues involving criminal use of firearms. Gun owners have learned that legislators cannot be trusted to do the right thing. As soon as one right is compromised, the lawmakers come back for more.

One last look

Wright will get second opinion

The Mets still expect injured captain David Wright to return to the lineup Monday in Atlanta, but he'll get one last second opinion on his injured left rotator cuff Monday morning. "He could walk in tomorrow and still have discomfort, and they can say, 'Well, you're going to have to rest it longer.' That may lead in a different direction," manager Terry Collins said Sunday. "I'm not planning on that."

Options to replace Jason Kidd as coach

With the stunning news Saturday night that Nets head coach Jason Kidd may not be long for the borough of Brooklyn, the team is left in an unexpected lurch.

Kidd reportedly made a power play to take over complete control of personnel decisions — including a push to trade franchise center Brook Lopez for the Bucks' Larry Sanders — and was rebuffed. The resulting rift between Kidd and ownership looks to be irreparable. So if Kidd does end up in Milwaukee, or elsewhere, the Nets are going to be in need of a new head coach.

And according to Yahoo! Sports' Adrian Wojn-

Visit Metro.us to read about why Jason Kidd is likely gone.

arowski, "the Russians are done with Kidd," so they better start looking for a new coach immediately.

Metro New York tosses out a few ideas as to who could replace Kidd on the Nets' bench. Ownership should have plenty of money to throw at the candidate they want, but they don't have a lot of choices, as most teams in need of a coach are already making their picks.

Mark Jackson

The man many Knicks fans wanted to replace Mike Woodson — instead of Derek Fisher, who was eventually hired — might be the most-desired Nets head coach, too. Jackson is a Brooklyn native and went to Bishop Loughlin Memorial High School in Fort Greene. He also played for St. John's and with the Knicks from 1987 to 1992 and again in 2001-2002. He was also successful in molding Golden State into a Western Conference power during his tenure from 2011 to 2014. But his relationship with ownership soured and he was fired despite a 51-31 season in 2013-2014. He'll want a lot of money from Brooklyn and a lot of power.

MARK JACKSON IS LIKELY CONTENT TO WORK ON TELEVISION IF HE DOESN'T GET HIS DEMANDS FROM THE NETS.

Tyronn Lue

Lue just signed a deal with the Cavaliers to become the highest-paid assistant coach in the league under first-time NBA coach David Blatt. The 10-year NBA veteran point guard has developed a reputation as the next big thing in coaching. He may have been an outside candidate for the Knicks' job, but they zeroed in on Fisher after Steve Kerr turned them down.

It might be complicated to lure him away from that newly signed deal with Cleveland, but he is an exciting name. Lue spent time working with Doc Rivers in Boston

By the numbers

$6.5M

The Cavaliers have reportedly signed Tyronn Lue to a four-year, $6.5 million deal to be the highest-paid assistant ever. Kidd was making $10.5 million over four years as Nets head coach.

and followed him to the Clippers.

Should the Nets care to re-sign Paul Pierce, Lue might be a way to lure him back and keep Kevin Garnett from retiring. Maybe the former point guard could unlock the puzzle that is Deron Williams' recent career as well.

Ettore Messina

If the Nets are looking to get adventurous, Messina might be the candidate. The 54-year-old Italian is one of the greatest European coaches ever. He's won four Euroleague titles (1998, 2001, 2006, 2008), most recently with CSKA Moscow. He left this month and has reportedly discussed joining the Spurs as an assistant. As the preeminent coach in the Russian League — where he has won five titles — you can bet Nets owner Mikhail Prokhorov is very familiar with him.

George Karl

By the numbers

CREATIVE COMMONS

There's no question Karl is the opposite of Tyronn Lue. He's 63 years old, has coached five different teams, and he won't earn you raves from the media if he is hired. But he wins basketball games — a lot of them, in fact.

The 2013 NBA Coach of the Year, after which he was fired by Denver, has said he wants another shot in the league. He sat out this year as an analyst for ESPN. He's made the playoffs in 22 of the 25 years he's coached, but he's never won a title. And he's only advanced out of the first round once in the last 10 times he's made the playoffs.

Karl is fully recovered from a bout with neck and throat cancer in 2010 and has already thrown his hat into the ring with the Lakers, who are also looking for a new coach.

Karl knows how to coach and he knows how to coach veterans. Unlike Mike D'Antoni, Karl's system will work much better with the personnel in place. But if you are looking for a sexy hire, this is not it.

1,131

George Karl has 1,131 wins in his career, with 423 of those coming while coaching the Nuggets in his most recent stop.

6

Karl is ranked sixth all time in NBA coaching victories, behind Don Nelson, Lenny Wilkens, Jerry Sloan, Pat Riley and Phil Jackson.

1,887

Karl ranks eighth all time in total games coached. Dick Motta and Bill Fitch are the only people who have coached more games, but they don't have more wins.

.432

Karl is just 80-105 (.432) in the playoffs during his career.

Mike D'Antoni

You can bet Nets fans wouldn't be too keen on seeing the former Knicks head coach take over across the East River. But he's certainly an option out there after being fired by the Lakers. He had tremendous success in Phoenix and was saddled with terrible rosters in New York and Los Angeles, so it's not crazy to think he deserves another chance so quickly. The roster as it's constructed would not be ideal for D'Antoni's system, however.

MIKE D'ANTONI SEEMS AN UNLIKELY CHOICE DUE TO THE NETS' AGING ROSTER.

Altidore update

JOZY ALTIDORE PULLED A HAMSTRING ON JUNE 16.

GETTY IMAGES

U.S. head coach Jurgen Klinsmann would not say for sure this past weekend whether injured star striker Jozy Altidore would be available for Tuesday's game against Belgium (4 p.m., ESPN) but remained "hopeful."

• "Every day is a big step forward with Jozy," Klinsmann said. "We are optimistic we'll have him be a part of the Belgium game."

• The forward did not participate in soccer-related activities at practice on Saturday, according to reports, and was seen jogging during the session. Klinsmann may use Altidore off the bench.

Mexico.

Arjen Robben's run in stoppage time crushed Mexican dreams completely when he earned a penalty in the box on former Red Bulls midfielder Rafa Marquez.

Klaas Jan Huntelaar put in the penalty kick in the 94th minute to give Netherlands its fourth trip to the Round of 8 all-time.

Costa Rica 1, Greece 1 (Costa Rica 5-3 on PKs)

Greece pulled off a miraculous comeback for the second straight game, but they couldn't finish this one off in extra time.

Bryan Ruiz put the Costa Ricans up 1-0 in the 52nd minute on a lightly struck left-footed shot from just outside the box. But it looked to be enough until Socratis Papastathopoulos scored off a rebound deep in the box in the 91st minute to tie it up.

Extra time ended scoreless, so they went to penalty kicks, where Greece's Theofanis Gekas missed the fourth attempt and Costa Rica went a perfect 5-for-5.

Rangers enter free agency with big salary problems

NHL. The Rangers are likely to lose a few key players due to cap issues when free agency begins tomorrow.

Rangers general manager Glen Sather delivered an unmistakable challenge to his pending free agents on Saturday.

"[If] you move on, it doesn't always work," Sather told reporters. "You have to decide what's the important thing: Winning or making a few more dollars someplace else? My book, it's always winning."

The Rangers' run to the Stanley Cup Final may lead to a free agency period in which useful components Brian Boyle, Dominic Moore, Benoit Pouliot and Anton Stralman are offered deals by rival franchises the reigning Eastern Conference champions cannot match.

Much of the available cap space will be earmarked for restricted free agents Derick Brassard, Chris Kreider, Mats Zuccarello and John Moore, all of whose representatives Sather said he has contacted.

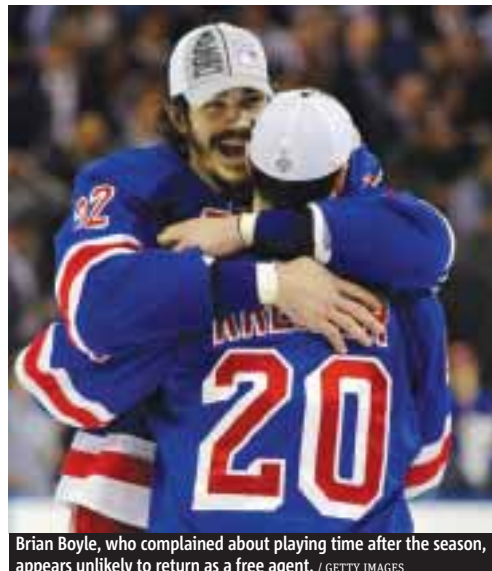

"Realistically, I think some of the guys have to pull their horns in a bit," Sather said. "We liked everybody. [We'd] like to keep everyone together."

Cap concerns

The Rangers will have to be judicious with their money when free agency begins July 1.

- $45,692,500: Salary the Rangers have committed to next season
- $69 million: The salary cap set by the NHL on Saturday.
- 5: Number of restricted free agents
- 6: Number of unrestricted free agents

Moving on

Brodeur to hit free agency

The biggest name in Devils history appears to be on the move.

The Devils have $59.285 million tied up in 17 players. Their needs are scoring, speed and a backup goaltender as it appears Martin Brodeur may sign a free agent contract with another organization.

A report by TVA Sports in Montreal listed the Leafs, Penguins, Bruins and Blackhawks as the teams most interested in the future Hall of Famer. DENIS GORMAN
